BROOKLYN EAGLE

December 28, 1954

For a couple of years now we have been talking over the possibility of the Dodgers getting a new stadium. After the first meeting or two with Moses and Cashmore, it was impressed upon everybody that government money could not be put in that sort of development.

You have always made it crystal clear that all you wanted was for the city to use its power to assemble a site -- perhaps in connection with a well rounded community development. There has never been any doubt about your position after the first meeting or two.

Sincerely,
